Page 2 - Design Interpretation

Northern Identity	How does the environment still belong visually in the North? We are keeping the wooden look by using dark wod for the walls, floors, tables, and chairs. We also use torch-based lighting to give the hall a warm, medieval atmosphere.
House Manderly	What makes this space recognizably Manderly rather than a generic Northern Hall? We added marine wall panels, banners, and blue green colors to represent House Manderly's connection to the sea. These details help make the hall feel different from typical Northern castles.
Wealth / Status	How are you showing that this is the court of a wealthy and important house? We show House Manderly’s wealth through the large hall, decorative pillars, carpets, and detailed furniture. The throne is placed on a raised dais with stairs, making it the main focal point and showing the importance of the house’s ruler.
Maritime Theme	How are you communicating the connection to the sea without turning the room into a fishing tavern? We used marine wall panels, blue – green fabrics, and banners to bring in the maritime theme. We wanted these details to be decorative rather than making the hall look like a fishing tavern.
Interpretation	Identify at least one element from the novel that you are deliberately interpreting rather than reproducing literally and explain why.

	The novel describes Merman’s Court as a wooden hall covered in sea-themed decorations. We kept the wooden architecture but simplified the decorations to make the room look more organized while still showing the connection to the sea.
